What is Cardiff University for?
The University exists to create and share knowledge and to educate for the benefit of all.

What kind of university do we want to be?
A world-leading, research-excellent, educationally outstanding university, driven by creativity and curiosity, which fulfils its social, cultural and economic obligations to Cardiff, Wales, and the world.

Education
We will educate our students to the very highest standards and support them through the transition to independent learning. The student experience at Cardiff will be a byword for excellence, where students actively participate in their learning experience and benefit from an environment of top quality research and scholarship.
We will have a vibrant, growing, and multinational postgraduate community associated with a research led University. We will recruit the brightest students from all strata of society with a particular focus on underrepresented groups, and be the university of choice for students from Wales, the rest of the UK, the EU and across the world. We will produce graduates who are delighted with their experience, who are well-rounded, flexible, mobile and highly employable individuals, many with work based and/or international experience. We will review our provision regularly to ensure that their academic and future successes identify our graduates as products of an educationally outstanding university.
